State Department of Defense first to respond

Hurricane Iniki hits Kauai

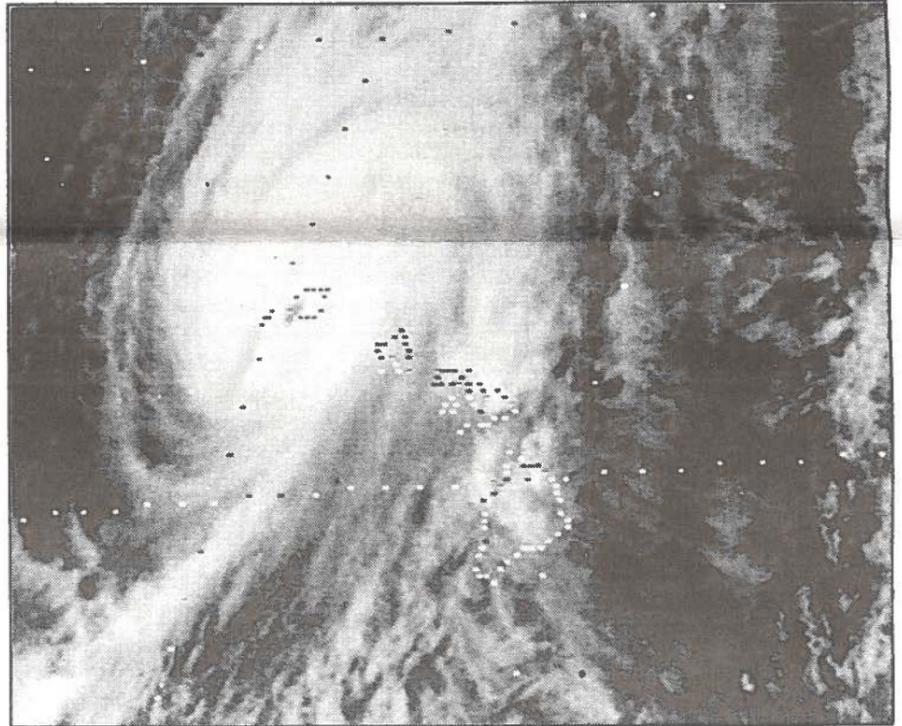

Maj. Wayne N. Yoshloka and Staff

The most destructive hurricane to hit the Hawaiian Islands and the third costliest natural disaster in U.S. history ripped through Kauai Sept. 11, packing 145 mile-per-hour winds with gusts of up to 227 that devastated the island and left a path of destruction extending to Oahu's Waianae coast and the Big Island. When it finally passed, Hurricane Iniki had destroyed or damaged seventy percent of Kauai homes and businesses, more than 560 homes on Oahu and 32 homes on the Big Island.

Although the immediate response and deployment of Hawaii National Guard members and equipment to Kauai was well documented by the news media, the state Department of Defense's preparation prior to the disaster adds insight into why the emergency response was so quick and effective.

Beginning on Sept. 6, five days before Iniki hit, State Civil Defense began to routinely monitor the storm as it appeared as a tropical depression (TD18E) in the southeastern Pacific Ocean. The storm system was more than 1,360 nautical miles southeast of Hawaii. At about 11 p.m., Tuesday, Sept. 8, Iniki was upgraded to a hurricane.

At 5:00 p.m., Sept. 10, the storm turned on a northwest track and was reported to be 400 nautical miles south of Lihue. Maj. Gen. Edward V. Richardson, the adjutant general and director of civil defense, activated the State Civil Defense (SCD) and Hawaii National Guard (HING) emergency operating centers (EOCs) on Oahu. By this time, Lt. Col. Myron N. Dobashi, commander of the 154th Air Control Squadron on Kauai was at the county EOC and Maj. Theodore A. Daligdig III, battalion administrative assistant, readied the Hawaii National Guard's Kapaa Armory to serve as an evacuation center. Kauai National Guard technicians secured equipment and vehicles and the more than 400 Army and Air Guard members on Kauai were advised to take care of their families. Commanders, key staff and unit members on other islands were placed on standby in accordance with established procedures. Hawaii Air National Guard combat communications units were also directed to prepare for deployment.

National Weather Service

The eye of Hurricane Iniki passed directly over Kauai on the afternoon of Sept. 11.

The state coordinated with county agencies to sound civil defense sirens at 5:30 the next morning and decided to close schools and require only emergency essential personnel to report to work.

At 1:20 p.m., Sept. 11, power went out on Kauai as Iniki swept over the island. A short time later, emergency communication went out between the Garden Isle and Oahu. At the state EOC on Oahu, Maj. Gen. Richardson and Roy C. Price Jr., vice director for SCD, briefed Gov. John Waihee on Iniki's movement and the state's contingency plans. The Federal Emergency Management Agency team arrived that same afternoon.

Throughout the evening, fierce winds trailing Iniki prevented aircraft from flying to Kauai. When they finally subsided at 5:30 a.m. the next day, more than 300 Big Island soldiers began deploying to Kauai aboard Air National Guard, Coast Guard and commercial aircraft, including six (6) California Air Guard C-130s and four (4) Coast Guard C-130s on loan for the recovery effort. Being the first military forces to arrive on Kauai, Army Guard troops were tasked to provide security and assist Kauai police, while the Air Guard re-established communications and coordinated the air flow. By the end of the day, C-130s had airlifted more than 100 tons of equipment and supplies to Kauai.

That morning, Gov. Waihee and Kauai Mayor JoAnn Yukimura, followed by Senators Daniel K. Inouye and Daniel K. Akaka, U.S. Representatives Patsy T. Mink and Neil Abercrombie, Maj. Gen. Richardson and key staff conducted aerial surveys of the island. The damage wrought by Iniki was nearly incomprehensible: thousands of utility poles were down, knocking out Kauai's electrical and telephone systems; electric water pumps were inoperative, cutting off the water supply to homes; crops lay in ruin; the shoreline and beaches were decimated; 14,340 homes on the island were damaged - 5,000 severely damaged or destroyed; and the many luxury hotels along the coast were badly damaged. At least 7,000 residents (continued on page 3)

Command notes

Maj. Gen. Edward V. Richardson
The Adjutant General

On behalf of Governor John Waihee and the residents of Kauai, I extend my heartfelt appreciation to the entire State Department of Defense family for your outstanding performance before, during and after Hurricane Iniki struck the islands on Sept. 11. I am extremely proud of what the department was able to accomplish, specifically, the emergency preparation, response and recovery assistance provided to the victims of that devastating storm. Many of you worked around-the-clock either on Kauai, Oahu's Waianae coast, at State Civil Defense, Hawaii Army or Air National Guard headquarters or at unit armories/facilities in support of our efforts. Other employees in the department shouldered the day-to-day responsibilities in your absence as did the thousands of family members who supported our people at home during this, the most intensely demanding state mission in our history.

Hurricane Iniki has already been recorded as the most destructive storm to hit Hawaii and the third most costly natural disaster in U.S. history. Our success in meeting the numerous requirements throughout this period is a culmination of many factors.

First, and possibly the most important, was the proactive nature of the actions we took before the hurricane hit. As the article on page one of this issue of the pupukahi notes, we followed the storm system from Sept. 6 when it first appeared as a tropical depression to its being upgraded to a hurricane, Sept. 8. When Iniki turned on a northwest track toward Kauai and Oahu, Sept. 10, we activated our emergency operating centers, tracked the progress of the storm with our two radar sites, prepared our vehicles and equipment, and had units on Hawaii and Maui on standby alert. On Sept. 11, Governor Waihee approved our recommendation to sound our civil defense sirens, close schools, and have only emergency essential employees report to work. Lt. Gen. John B. Conaway, chief, National Guard Bureau, offered six California Air National Guard C-130 aircraft and mobile communications equipment for our use. Rear Admiral William C. Donnell, commander, 14th Coast Guard District, volunteered four more C-130 aircraft.

As the hurricane approached Kauai and Oahu on Sept. 11, we pre-positioned aircraft and equipment, notified our troops and were ready to deploy them and their equipment as soon as weather permitted.

A second factor was the State's leadership during the initial response and recovery phases. Governor Waihee provided the leadership and guidance to ensure the State did everything possible to support the County of Kauai and help residents during the emergency response and recovery phases. He also tasked me to coordinate the cleaning and repair of public schools and to launch "Operation Garden Sweep," a joint effort to clean Kauai for recovery and public health reasons.

The third factor was the teamwork demonstrated by all levels of the county, state and federal governments. No single agency or level of government could have single-handedly provided all of the support and resources required for a disaster of this magnitude. All of the leaders involved in the effort recognized this early on and cooperated fully toward the common goal of being responsive to the needs of Kauai's people. This spirit of cooperation and teamwork enabled us to deploy and position all available assets in a timely and efficient manner. I thank Mr.

Wallace Stickney, director of the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) and Lt. Gen. Johnnie Corns, commander of the U.S. Army Pacific, for their outstanding support.

It is also important to remember that all of the actions we took before, during and after Iniki struck Kauai were based on lessons learned from previous disasters and emergency response exercises. The training we have done in civil defense has paid off and we will continue to refine our plans and conduct training to be proactive and to provide a rapid response to all disasters.

Each of you made significant contributions to our total effort. You should be proud of your monumental achievements and take pride in the professional manner in which you accomplished these assignments. Again, mahalo to all of the soldiers, airmen, civilians and family members of the State Department of Defense. You have all done an incredibly outstanding job and truly deserve the praise and gratitude of the entire state.

Commissary cards

Effective Aug. 1, 1992, all Guard personnel MUST use their 1992 commissary cards to enter the commissary. The August issue of National Guard magazine incorrectly reported that commissary cards were not required.

Military courses rescheduled

Due to Hurricane Iniki relief efforts, the Hawaii Military Academy (HMA) has rescheduled start dates two of its courses.

New training year 1993 start dates for the first sergeants and battle staff course will be announced at a later date. (BNCOC Class 1-93 began as scheduled on Oct. 3.) Officer candidates and non-prior service soldiers should report to drill on Oct. 17-18 instead of Oct. 3-4.

Call HMA at 259-7850 for more information.

Counterdrug program recognized

The U.S. Department of Agriculture, Plant Protection and Quarantine (PPQ), extends its appreciation to the Hawaii National Guard members assigned to the Post Office's customs facility between Jan. 1 and June 30 of this year. During this period, HING personnel made 307 referrals which resulted in 114 interceptions (26 percent of total interceptions).

Guard members interested in assisting the Counterdrug Coordination Office should talk to their unit commander.

Air refueling squadron moved

The 203rd Air Refueling Squadron has moved its command and operations functions from Hangar 13 to Building 2155. Temporary telephone numbers are 449-5804/7771.

Air Force uniform changes

Air National Guard members should be aware of the following uniform changes:

Wearing "ANG" instead of "USAF" on the second line of the aircrew style name patch (ASNP) has been disapproved by Headquarters, U.S. Air Force. The ASNP is presently optional wear and must be purchased by the member; issuance will begin on or after the mandatory wear date of October 1995.

The wearout date for the olive green field jacket has been changed from Sept. 30, 1992, to wearout date through attrition. Members are not required to turn in the jackets.

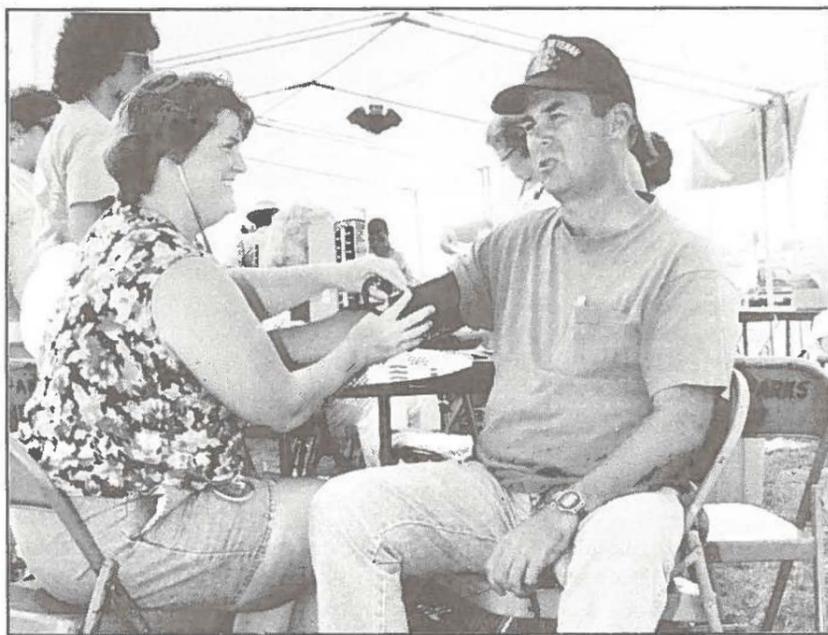

The Air Force chief of staff also approved the following uniform changes which will become effective when AFR 35-10 is revised:

- Improved hot weather and desert BDUs with 50 nylon/50 cotton fabric.

- Removed BDU knee pleats and one lower bellow-style pocket.
- Removed the yoke on the back of the BDU shirt but retention of the elbow patch on the desert BDUs.
- Removed the BDU waist tabs and taking the waist in three inches.
- Authorized a mock double-breasted maternity jumper.
- Designated the standard issue blouse for women to be a tuck-in shirt with a button closure at the neck and plain seams down the front.

- Deleted the wear of shoulder cords, braided cords and cords representing military citation with uniforms.
- Authorized security policewomen to wear OSD, JCS, or other identification badges on the left side of their service dress uniform.
- Authorized medical food inspectors to wear a paper hat on hair net while performing official facility inspection duties.

Hawaii National Guard's newest generals

Nakatsu, Mizumoto promoted

Brig. Gen. (Hawaii) Myles M. Nakatsu, deputy adjutant general, and Brig. Gen. Allen M. Mizumoto, commander of the Hawaii Air National Guard (HIANG), were promoted this summer in separate ceremonies.

Nakatsu, 54, has served as the deputy adjutant general since 1988. He was promoted July 15 and pinned by Gov. John Waihee Sept. 1.

Nakatsu enlisted in the Guard as a medical corpsman in 1961 and received his commission from the Hawaii Military Academy three years later. His past assignments include aide-de-camp, senior tactical officer, and chief of staff for the adjutant general. His military awards include the Meritorious Service Medal, Army Commendation Medal and Hawaii National Guard Medal for Merit.

Born and raised on the Big Island, Nakatsu graduated from Hilo High School and received a bachelor's in education and teaching certificate from the University of Hawaii. He was a professional educator for many years and served as principal of Ilima Intermediate School until his appointment as the executive support officer to the adjutant general.

Nakatsu and his wife, Nancy, live in Aiea and have a son, Lance, and daughter, Shenann.

One year after assuming command of the Hawaii Air National Guard, Mizumoto, 56, has also been promoted to brigadier general. He received his federal recognition in the Air National Guard Aug. 13 and was pinned Aug. 19.

Like Nakatsu, Mizumoto began his career with the Guard as an enlisted member. Initially assigned to the 199th Fighter Interceptor Squadron as a fire control systems mechanic in 1954, he rose to the rank of senior master sergeant before accepting a direct commission in 1965. As an officer, Mizumoto worked in avionics, communications-electronics and ground electronics before becoming the deputy commander for maintenance, 154th Composite Group, in 1979. His military awards include the Meritorious Service Medal, Air Force Commendation Medal with Four Oak Leaf Clusters and Air Force Outstanding Unit Award with Four Oak Leaf Clusters.

Mizumoto and his wife, Miriam, have two daughters, Lori and Cari, and a son, Lance. Lance is an officer in the Hawaii Air National Guard.

were homeless and another 8,000 needed food and water. Three people were dead. The destruction of the Lihue Airport tower's communication system resulted in the suspension of commercial airline flights into Lihue Airport and left thousands of tourists stranded at evacuation centers.

A National Guard team led by Col. Edward L. Correa Jr., deputy commander of the Hawaii Army National Guard, moved to the Kauai County Building to coordinate the emergency response and recovery. More than 380 Army Guard soldiers provided security, safety and courtesy patrols; airmen from the 154th Civil Engineering Squadron and 154th Services Flight served meals from their mobile kitchen trailers; and Kauai soldiers and airmen helped their neighbors, giving them food, water and offering them a place for temporary shelter. At the Kapaa Armory alone, food and shelter were provided for more than 600 residents.

A presidential disaster declaration was signed in the early hours of Sept. 12.

The same day, the Air National Guard transported Wilcox Memorial Hospital patients and stranded tourists to Oahu. Forty-two patients and more than 1,220 visitors were eventually flown from Kauai. The Guard also continued to transport relief supplies, food and medical personnel.

The sole Guard fatality occurred late Monday, Sept. 13, when Tech. Sgt. Dennis C. Dalen of the Hawaii Air National Guard's 297th Air Traffic Control Flight died in a traffic accident enroute to repairing a generator. Dalen was interred at the State Veterans Cemetery on Oahu with full military honors.

The Hawaii National Guard task force grew to nearly 1,300 troops with the Sept. 14 arrival of the Army Guard's 1st Battalion, 299th Infantry, 129th Signal Detachment, 29th Support Battalion, 297th Supply and Service Battalion, 298th Engineer Detachment and 227th Engineer Company and the Air Guard's 154th Security Police Flight.

Restoring electrical power on the island was a top priority. Col. David Rodrigues, Hawaii Air National Guard chief of staff and vice president of operations for Hawaiian Electric Co., was selected to oversee electricity restoration and deployment of repair crews and equipment. Throughout the recovery, the Hawaii National Guard kept its generators running.

Food, ice, plastic sheeting and medical care were in great demand following the hurricane. Soldiers of the 297th Supply and Service Battalion set up and operated relief distribution centers at Lihue, Kapaa, Hanapepe, Kalaheo and Princeville.

Two battalion aid stations were established at the Kapaa and Hanapepe armories. Medical teams augmented military aid personnel by going house-to-house to treat residents. By the end of the month, Guard medics had treated more than 1,000 patients, mostly for minor injuries, cuts and bruises.

The possibility of rain made repairing roofs another priority. Armed with carpentry tools and chainsaws, the 298th and 227th engineers repaired homes for residents unable help themselves.

Gov. Waihee tasked Maj. Gen. Richardson to coordinate the clean-up of public schools on Kauai and to launch "Operation Garden Sweep," a joint county, state and federal effort to collect and transport household garbage and debris to Kauai landfill sites. Guard and active duty military personnel removed debris, patched roofs and cleaned classrooms at 15 schools throughout the island. On Monday, Sept. 21, more than 500 Hawaii Air National Guard members deployed to Lihue to participate in "Garden Sweep."

In the first three weeks of the emergency and response phase of Operation Iniki, more than 3,000 members of the Hawaii National Guard were directly involved in serving and assisting Kauai county residents.

On Saturday, Sept. 26, the 500 airmen on Kauai for "Operation Garden Sweep" redeployed to their home stations.

That same day, the Army Guard's 1st Battalion, 487th Field Artillery, deployed to Kauai to replace the 1st and 2nd Battalions, 299th Infantry units and military police in their security missions. Upon their return, Sunday, Sept. 27, the infantry units and military police were greeted by welcome home celebrations with families and friends.

Today, the State Department of Defense continues to work with county, federal and active military organizations to support Iniki recovery efforts.

Commission chooses from among 51 entries

Veterans memorial design selected

By Nancy Williams

After months of public debate, followed by a whirlwind finish, the long-awaited design for the Korean-Vietnam veterans memorial was selected Sept. 28 by the state Commission on Memorials for Veterans of the Korean and Vietnam Conflicts. The design, by 30-year old architect and former Army reservist Paul Medley, consists of two winding walls of terraced granite blocks — one for each war — inscribed with the names of those killed or missing in action. The structure is designed to allow visitors to touch the names and adorn them with flowers on special holidays.

The memorial design competition was reopened by the state legislature after some veterans expressed discontent over a lack of input in the initial selection process. House Bill 3658, which became law without Gov. John Waihee's signature July 7, gave the nine-member Memorials Commission just 90 days to solicit entries, receive public input and select a design.

Shortly after passage of the new law, six members of the original Commission resigned in protest, delaying the selection process until new members could be appointed. Five appointments were announced Aug. 18. Ken Kupchak, Pat Hammon and John Ching, the three remaining members of the original Commission, were joined by Allan Kellogg Jr., Ellsworth "Breezer" Bush, Norbert K. Enos, Kurt E. Johnson and John A. Parrish Jr. The Commission went straight to work, electing Kupchak as chairman, Kellogg as vice chair and Hammon as secretary. In early September, Herbert S. Kondo became the final appointee to the Commission.

Criteria for design entries were announced Aug. 20 and a Sept. 16 deadline was set for submission of entries. Despite the quick turnaround time, the response was overwhelming. Fifty-one entries were received, with designs ranging from simple, engraved walls to complex and detailed forms. Several designers drew inspiration from Hawaiian culture and tradition. Others incorporated features such as fountains, reflecting pools, flames, helmets, bayonets and human figures.

Assisted by the state Department of Defense and Office of Veterans Services, the Commission put together a rigorous six-day schedule to display the entries throughout the state. Seven locations were selected on the islands of Oahu, Hawaii, Maui and Kauai. Veterans and members of the National Guard helped transport and oversee the displays during the 10-hour days. When Hurricane Iniki intervened, reducing the available National Guard support and forcing cancellation of display plans for Kauai, National Guard family support groups stepped in to help staff the sites.

Commission members visited each display location to hear what veterans, their families and friends had to say about the entries. Kurt Johnson, commission member, explained that talking to people about their ideas for a memorial gave him a new way of looking at the entries.

The displays evoked emotion and generally positive comments from those who came to see them. Warren Guyer, a Vietnam vet from Hilo, said, "I think they should keep it simple and try to make a point, so we don't have to make any more."

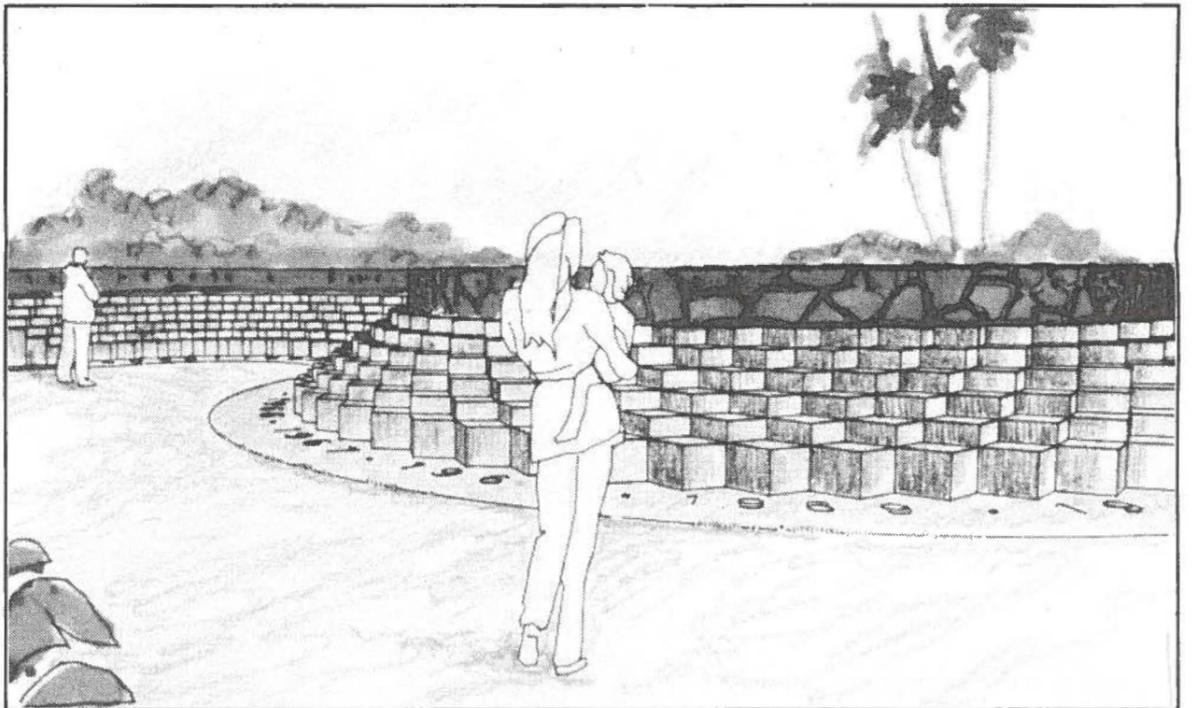

"What I see in here is good. It's good that we have a choice," said Korean vet James Y. C. Lee, also of Hilo.

A comment card, designed by Jim Dannemiller of SMS Research, encouraged visitors to put their views in writing. Over 1,000 cards were filled out. Dr. Gene Kassebaum of the University of Hawaii made arrangements to tabulate and analyze them in order to give the Commission a better idea of which designs generated the most enthusiasm.

The Memorials Review Board was required to approve or disapprove of the Commission's design selection within seven days of receiving word from the Commission. The Review Board was established under the same act that reopened the design competition to ensure that the design selection proceeded fairly and according to the law. The Medley design was approved by the Board Oct. 8. The Department of Accounting and General Services will solicit bids for the memorial's construction on the Ewa lawn of the State Capitol.

OFFICE OF THE MAYOR

To the Men and Women of the State of Hawaii Department of Defense (more affectionately known as the Hawaii National Guard):

The people of Kauai will never forget how you came to our aid, and continue to help us in the wake of Hurricane Iniki. You guarded our homes and businesses, and brought food, water, portable toilets, and generators to our shelters and feeding sites. You helped us clear the debris from our streets and yards and schools, and you climbed on our roofs to cover our homes with plastic sheeting. You set up and manned distribution centers. You cooked "local style" ono food for us!

Some of you stayed in Honolulu and provided all the necessary support to those on Kauai. Your families and employers endured your absence and gave you support. The list goes on and on.

One of you made the supreme sacrifice and gave his life in an effort to deliver a generator to start a water system for the community.

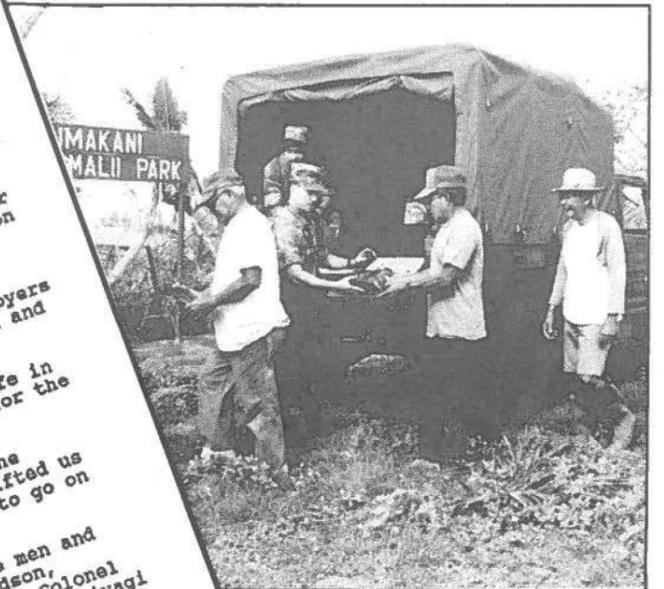

In addition to all the physical help, you brought the marvelous medicine of good cheer and compassion. You lifted us from devastation and despair. You gave us the courage to go on and rebuild. You were there when we needed you.

Our hearts overflow with thanksgiving to you, the men and women of the Hawaii National Guard; to General Richardson, General Imai, Colonel Correa, Colonel Agena, Lieutenant Colonel Ishida, Lieutenant Colonel Kaneshi, and Lieutenant Colonel Miyagi for your leadership; and to your families and employers.

On behalf of the people of Kauai, I salute you and thank each one of you for a job well done!

With great respect and aloha,

Tech. Sgt. Dennis C. Dalen, 46, died on Kauai while assisting in Hurricane Iniki recovery efforts, Sept. 14. Dalen, better known as "Cliff," was killed in a vehicular accident enroute to repairing a generator. A second airman received minor injuries.

Dalen was an electrical power production technician with the 297th Air Traffic Control Flight stationed at Naval Air Station Barbers Point, Oahu. A dedicated military man, he served on active duty and with the Air Force Reserve before joining the Guard in 1974. He became a full-time Guard technician in 1978.

Dalen was born in Oakland, Calif., and moved to Hawaii with his family in the mid 1950s. He graduated from Iolani School in 1965.

The Hawaii National Guard extends its deepest condolences to Sgt. Dalen's wife, Yong Sun, the Dalen family, and Cliff's many friends.

Employer Support for the Guard and Reserve

Bosses head north to Alaska

Twenty-seven employers traveled to Alaska, Aug. 26-30, on a "bosslift" sponsored by the Hawaii chapter of Employer Support for the Guard and Reserve (ESGR). The purpose of the trip was to familiarize employers with military training and the role that reserve forces play in national defense by giving bosses a firsthand look at what occurs during weekend drills and annual training.

The group visited military training sites across the 49th state and were briefed on cold weather training, operations and equipment. The highlight of the trip was a visit to the town of Kotzebue in the Arctic Circle, where employers had the opportunity to learn about the Alaska Army National Guard's Eskimo scout battalion.

The employers, who represent a cross-section of the business community, gained a better understanding of reserve forces.

Some bosses mentioned differences between reservists and other employees, characterizing reservists as more disciplined and dedicated. According to Pat Feyerisen, Allied Machinery Corporation president, Guard and reserve members "seem to have a higher level of dedication and involvement in their work." Of Feyerisen's 90 employees, seven are in the Guard or reserves. Carl Fujita, Kauai chief of police, and Eugene Uemura, Honolulu Police Department assistant chief, agreed that members of the Guard and reserves have an easier time assimilating into the police department because of its para-military structure. County police departments are among the largest employers of reservists.

Other bosses said the trip changed their impression of National Guard and reserve members. Frank Kawamoto, Royal Hawaiian Distributors, Inc. president, said the visit altered his image of reservists "100 percent." He was impressed by the cooperation between active and Guard components, saying "I now see that the Guard and reserve forces are an extension of the active Army."

Having never been in the military, Fujita said he used to think that giving reservists time off to train was unfair to other employees. After taking the trip, he says he now realizes the importance of the reserve forces and the training necessary to maintain preparedness. Uemura said the trip changed his mind about the "part-time" Guard member because of the role they play in civil disturbances such as the Los Angeles riots and natural disasters such as Hurricane Andrew.

Gary Yoshimura, acting assistant chief for the Hilo Fire Department, makes out the work and vacation schedules for his department. Like Fujita, Yoshimura didn't like giving time off because it curtailed the other firefighters' vacations. "However, now that I see firsthand how important their mission is, you won't hear any complaints from me."

The group traveled to Alaska on a Washington Air National Guard KC-135 Stratotanker. Return transportation was via an Alaska Air National KC-135 and afforded travellers the opportunity to view the air-to-air refueling of F-15 fighter jets from the Hawaii Air Guard.

The bosslift was organized and hosted by P. Pasha Baker, Hawaii ESGR chairman. Also accompanying the group were Maj. Gen. Edward V. Richardson, the adjutant general, and Brig. Gen. Calvin Lau, commander of IX Corps, U.S. Army Reserve.

The Hawaii ESGR Committee is composed of local business leaders and representatives of the seven military reserve components.

PROUD TO BE A MEMBER OF THE HAWAII ARMY NATIONAL GUARD!!! The Hawaii Army National Guard has once again demonstrated its ability to respond quickly and effectively to a variety of missions. Hurricane Iniki, which was the third costliest natural disaster in the history of the United States, devastated Kauai on Sept. 11 with 160+ mph winds. While it was extremely fortunate that injuries and loss of lives were so low, the property and infrastructure damage was nearly incomprehensible. The HIARNG responded quickly to the needs of the people of Kauai.

Within hours of the passing of the trailing winds of Iniki, an advance party of HIARNG was flown into Lihue during the early morning hours of Sept. 12. The party met with Kauai County officials and received its mission. The primary need was for security. The 2nd Battalion of the 29th Infantry Brigade (Separate) was alerted, and within 12 hours of receiving the mission, the Battalion, with more than 400 soldiers, closed on Kauai. Immediate security patrols were established, as directed by the Kauai Police Department, and looting was held to a minimum. As additional missions were assigned, a Task Force headquarters and additional elements of HIARNG were committed to Kauai. More than 1,400 troops have to date been activated for the Kauai recovery and relief missions.

Principal missions for HIARNG have been: security; operation of food and material distribution points; clean-up and recovery; mass feeding; and ground and air transportation. The security missions have been performed by the 1st and 2nd Battalions, 487th Field Artillery and the military police platoon of the 29th Infantry Brigade (Separate), the operation of the major distribution points has been under the direction of the 297th Supply and Service Battalion of Troop Command, the clean-up and recovery missions have been performed by the 227th Engineers, the 298th Engineers and other elements of the HIARNG on the ground, the mass feeding has been performed by elements of the two battalions of the 29th SIB, and transportation missions have been performed by all units with ground transportation capabilities, and by the 451st, 452nd and the 193rd for aerial transport.

All HIARNG troops quickly identified with the suffering of the people of Kauai, and put their hearts and souls into assisting them. There were many heartrending stories such as: when troops from Company D, 2nd Battalion, shared their own rations (M-R-Es) with people seeking food, when the men of Company C, 1st Battalion, took up a collection for a child in Kekaha on her birthday, when soldiers of the Molokai detachment helped senior citizens in Koloa patch the roofs of their homes, of communities sharing their limited food with HIARNG troops assigned to the security missions, and of a love affair between communities and the Guard soldiers helping them.

The activation and deployment of our troops was difficult on them and their families, but I'm sure that they take comfort in knowing that the Guard is there to protect and assist them also should this type of disaster affect their homes. Even with our focus on Kauai, the HIARNG was prepared for a possible attack on the Big Island by Hurricane Roslyn. Members of the Guard family (Army and Air) who live on Kauai were assisted as we were able to locate them and determine their needs.

I know the soldiers who were involved in this operation have a tremendous amount of pride in what they did to help the people of Kauai. Let me pass on the many grateful thanks paid to the members of the HIARNG by the Governor, the Mayor of Kauai, government officials and the general population of Kauai for your outstanding response during these difficult times.

2nd Lt. Christopher M. Slavens of Kaneohe, Oahu, received the Adjutant General's Award at commissioning ceremonies held at the Hale Koa Hotel, Aug. 23. Slavens is with Maui's Company C, 1st Battalion, 299th Infantry, and was named the Hawaii Military Academy's outstanding graduate. He is a job counselor at Castle High School.

Airmen help elderly residents

2nd Lt. Charles Anthony

201st Combat Communications Group

Operation Garden Sweep in the aftermath of Hurricane Iniki was a massive, coordinated effort of manpower, muscle, sweat and machines. From Sept. 20-28, more than 5,000 active duty Army soldiers, Marines, and Army and Air National Guard personnel hauled away 5,000 truckloads of storm debris from Kauai neighborhoods. Lihue took on the look of a town under military occupation, as 2 1/2-ton trucks and other vehicles criss-crossed from one subdivision to another.

But nowhere else on Earth could such an "occupation" be accepted with so much aloha from the local residents and be as rewarding for the military personnel involved. Everywhere they went on Kauai, the soldiers, Marines and airmen received warm smiles, cold drinks, kind words of thanks, waves and handshakes from the local folks.

Although the clean-up effort was a massive undertaking, perhaps one of the best examples of the aloha spirit could be found by following a work crew of 10 men from the Hawaii Air National Guard's 201st Combat Communications Group.

Senior Master Sgt. Al Freitas from Maui's 292nd Combat Communications Squadron saw the need to help the elderly victims of "Iniki" who couldn't handle the tough physical workload. On two consecutive mornings, Freitas organized a group of volunteers from the afternoon shift who would spend their free time in the mornings helping others.

The first stop one morning was an elderly care home, where about 45 minutes of yard work was enough to make the property look almost as neat as before the storm. Next it was on to the home of Mrs. Miyaji, a widow who weathered the hurricane alone. Her house sustained minor damage compared to many, but a large tree in her backyard had been knocked over and needed to be removed. Two 201st CCGP volunteers fired up a couple of chainsaws and cut the tree into manageable pieces while others hand carried load after load of logs and branches to the truck. A few streets over, part of the roof from

Mr. Hamamoto's house had been blown into his backyard. Piece by piece the roof portion was lugged away by the 201st volunteers. Next door, an 82-year old widow said Hurricane Iwa had run away with her roof--she said she was lucky this time because only the front of the house was damaged and the yard was a tangled mess of branches and dead shrubs. "We're all so grateful. You folks have done a tremendous job," she said after her yard had been restored to its pre-hurricane condition.

Only time prevented the airmen from going door to door to every house in that neighborhood. Before they knew it, the morning was over and their spare time was up. The airmen had just finished four hours of hard work and the rest of their day would consist of a quick M-R-E lunch, whenever and wherever they could squeeze in a break, and more manual labor until dusk. They were hot, grimy and still sore from the day before, but they felt great knowing that their efforts meant so much to people who had lost so much in the hurricane.

Sports

Celebrities attend annual Air Guard golf tournament

U.S. Sen. Daniel Akaka and local entertainer Danny Kaleikini were among the prominent participants in the 14th Annual Hawaii Air National Guard Golf Tournament held at Hickam Air Force Base's Mamala Bay Golf Course, Aug. 17. The big winner of the day was Senior Master Sgt. William Tabe, 150th Aircraft Control and Warning Squadron, who turned in the individual low net and walked away with the perpetual trophy.

There was lots of food, fellowship and door prizes following play, and tournament coordinator Master Sgt. Carl Wai, 154th Resource Management Squadron, extends his thanks to the many volunteers and businesses who contributed to the tournament's success.

CNGB match programs

Official match programs for the 1993 Chief of the National Guard Bureau (CNGB) postal tournaments, which includes smallbore, combat and air rifle and pistol indoor competitions, have been mailed to all Army and Air National Guard units. The primary goal of the CNGB tournament is to provide entry-level competition for beginning and developing shooters.

How to avoid fitness-related injuries, aches

Submitted by Staff Sgt. Melvin Partido
HIARNG Safety Office

There's hardly an athlete alive--"week-end," amateur or professional--who hasn't known the pain, disappointment and frustration that can result from a fitness-related injury. And while some accidents are beyond our control, the vast majority of fitness injuries can be prevented by following sensible exercise guidelines.

The most important times for preventing fitness injuries occur while you're not even engaged in your activity! The periods before and after exercise are critical times for preventing unnecessary pain and injury. By "warming up" for five minutes prior to exercise, you can increase blood flow to inactive muscles and gradually raise your heart rate to its target zone. Similarly, you can gradually lower your heart rate to its resting rate by walking for five minutes after exercise.

Gentle static stretching is an important part of the warm up/cool down process. Pre-exercise stretching limbers tight muscles and improves joint flexibility, reducing the risk of sprains and tears. Concentrate on stretching those muscle groups used in your particular activity. For example, runners will want to focus on stretching out the legs, while swimmers will want to emphasize upper body muscles. Static stretching after exercise will prevent muscle soreness.

Improper equipment, such as worn exercise shoes or an ill-fitting bicycle, can cause more harm than generally realized. Always check your equipment before and after your activity and be sure to replace or repair parts promptly. Worn out shoes may bring you "good luck," but they can also bring an ankle or leg injury if they fail to support your feet properly. Although cycling places less stress on bones and joints than high impact sports, an ill-fitting bike can lead to back and knee pain and/or injury. Whatever the activity, be sure that your equipment is in top condition before risking your health and safety.

Helmets, goggles, gloves, braces, even sunscreen, are just a few of the numerous safety "devices" available to today's athletes. Each activity carries its own risks, and the devices you use will depend on your particular activity. While some safety gear may feel awkward or "look funny," remember that these minor inconveniences far outweigh the risk reduction you'll enjoy.

The most important factor in fitness prevention is common sense. Make sure your muscles are conditioned before engaging in vigorous activities and use the right equipment and safety devices. Fitness should be fun and the best way to enjoy your activity and prevent unnecessary injuries is to use your common sense.

Blood Bank needs donors

The Blood Bank of Hawaii is facing a blood shortage and asking for the public's help. Donors of all blood types are asked to call 845-9966 to schedule an appointment.

Because of the DOD's prominent role in state emergencies, department employees are encouraged to show their support for this lifesaving cause.
